SYNOPSIS:

Haunted by her tortured childhood and the violent loss of the great love of her life, troubled dental assistant Eni finds escape in Los Cos, a mysterious underground club where cosplay and burlesque intertwine and heroes and villains blur the line between fantasy and reality. But when a cosplayer dressed as "Merman" shows up dead on a New Jersey beach and a mysterious stalker gets up in her DMs, Eni must confront the traumas that have shaped her life and transform herself into an altogether more formidable force.

DIRECTOR'S STATEMENT:

Only Fantasy can save us from reality

I've often wondered what drives a person to become a performer; to put on a costume, and stare the audience straight in the face. These men and women transform themselves into a different personality and step fearlessly into a different world.

Who are these people and where would we be without them?

When I set out to make this movie, I was unaware of the depth and complexity of the Cos Play Universe. A world where the players commit wholeheartedly to transforming themselves into fantastic comic book superheroes and villains. They are all performers.

Lost Cos dives headfirst into this intriguing mysterious world where reality and fantasy blur. This underground place is where I love to be, a place for creative minds that to feel at home. I hope you will join the Unique Lost Cos community.

– Director Robin de Levita, New York

Q&A with Producers Evgeniya Radilova & Catriona Rubenis-Stevens

1- What inspired you to make Los Cos?

EVGENIYA: Lost Cos was born from wishful thinking, merely a dream, but it felt like something that was meant to happen. It was charged with energy, and I had to act on it. This is an example of a true manifestation and I do believe that we shape our lives and dreams do come true indeed. So I did turn my dream into a reality that manifested in a feature film with 230 cast and crew members, and the creation of the first cosplay club on film. But in 2022 we hope to bring the club to real life. When I did the cosplay character shoot for Vampirella with Jeffrey Smith Georges three years ago, I saw a different me – brave, adventurous and free, someone I really liked....So I said to myself I have to do something with this character while I still have it. Jeff and I created a break through session of Vampirella and we sent it out into the universe. Long story short Robin De Levita saw the pictures, asked me what my plan was with them and we started thinking. We decided we will do our own version of the character and created the first cosplay movie.

CATRIONA: I was brought onto the project by Evgeniya the month before they started principal photography. It all happened very fast. I was contacted in the afternoon and sent the script, then I met with the team at 7pm for an interview and by 9pm we were all shaking hands and planning our first round of film shoots! It was a whirlwind adventure. I couldn't put the script down when I first read it - and even though the idea of producing a superhero/action film was something completely new to me, I knew I had to take this challenge on. It was important to me that the above-the-line team was represented fairly, and so getting to be involved as a female producer on a film about female trauma and overcoming that, was an easy decision for me to make.

2- What was the most challenging aspect of making this film?

EVGENIYA: The very beginning was a huge challenge already. We started with a 3-page script idea, we expanded it to a 40 minutes' pilot, started filming, and then we decided to complete the project and make it into a film, and after that we would split that into a series.

So we wrote as we went. Not sure I will do this process again as it was very hard and there were moments of doubt of course, but it was an incredibly valuable learning experience, and we managed to finish it all.

CATRIONA: I think one of the biggest challenges, besides what Eni has mentioned, was trying to complete this during a global pandemic. When we started our first round of filming in 2019, we worked for about two months, doing shoots once or twice a week, depending on actor availability. This gave us plenty of time to prep in between big scenes and figure out all the logistics. However, when we went on hiatus in December of 2019 with the goal of resuming and wrapping photography early the following spring, nothing could have prepared us for what was to happen in March of 2020. So our shoot days ended up spanning over 3 years!

3- *The story centers on two female characters. How did you feel about the film being told from a woman's perspective?

EVGENIYA: I felt that it was necessary. Women are incredibly versatile, layered and complex and we need to tell our side of the story, but most importantly we need to be listened to. And let's be honest, we are tired of being given the same role or to answer to someone's expectations, being told to be nice or that we need to behave in a certain way. These unapologetic brave women who might make you feel uncomfortable do exist but as long as they are not hurting anybody, they are free to be. I find it extremely important to continue making more movies about complex, strong, brave women, but also to support young and upcoming female artists as we all know this business is hard and not always very welcoming and accommodating towards women.

CATRIONA: The story being told from a female perspective is the only way this film could be told. During filming, we pushed hard to ensure that the way our characters were portrayed was multidimensional, fair and truthful. On the production side, it was also important for me as a producer to ensure that our crew was diverse as well. We hired female sound designers, art directors, production managers, composers, editors and stylists. Our story both behind and in front of the camera needed to be fair and equal.

4- *How did Tony winner, Robin de Levita, get involved in the project as the film director?

EVGENIYA: Robin De Levita saw the pictures of my photo session of Vampirella and became very interested. We met 3 years ago and he asked me what I was planning to do with this project. I said I am trying to put it on screen, get the rights, etc. But very quickly we realized that we can join the effort and create a movie about our own self-made superheros. About real people and real cosplayers. And we embarked on this journey.

5- You recently released a book at New York Comic con. How did the idea come about?

EVGENIYA: The idea to add animation to the movie and create our own comic book had actually been a plan from the start and we developed the project with that in mind. We used this artistic medium to tell the often harsh stories and sometimes unpleasant realities in a less aggressive way for the audience. The cartoons that are part of the film are indeed snippets of the world we live in. I was beyond happy to showcase my dear friend Adriano Moraes work as our animator, and to add one more incredible talent to the extraordinary team we already had.

In all my work there is always a meaning and a purpose, and here again with our film we aim to shed light on the cosplay community, their fascinating lifestyle and their art. We wanted to create a welcoming place like home for them where they can resort to anytime they want, showcase their work, make connections and have tons of fun.

We also want to create a real life cosplay venue with the Lost Cos club and create the first home for real cosplayers outside all the Cons out there.

The next step is creating a TV series out of Lost Cos, as initially it was written with this intention and each character and story line deserves their own screen time.
